But Mr. Stoessel, Gen. Er-nest Graves, director of the De-fense Security Agency, and other administration officials said there were a number of key differences between the situation in El Salva-dor and what the United States faced in Vietnam in the 1960s.

"The steps we are taking are very modest," Mr. Stoessel said, "The situation is containable." Democratic opposition to the administration's policy was evi-denced both by the questioning and by the introduction of legisla-tion sponsored by Sens. Paul Tson-gas and Edward M. Kennedy, both Massachusetts Democrats, to suspend military aid to the Central American country unless five spe-cific conditions are met.

The conditions include a thorough investigation into the killings of four American Remain Catholic missionary women in El Salvador last December and a written quest for the military advisers from the Duarte government.

Administration officials said they are satisfied thus far with the extent of Salvadoran efforts to find the killers of the missionaries. As for the advisers, Mr. Stoessel said Mr. Duarte, seeking to keep the U.S. presence as small as possible, had personally approved the need for each of the 54.

'No Future' People Rebel in West Germany Youth Protest Embraces Squatters and Social Critics

A neighborhood of old tenement-type buildings, minus the fire escapes. Kreuzberg provides the background for the most circumscribable part of an increasingly violent, increasingly intense prost movement involving young West Germans.

Most often, the issues center on the squatters here who have taken over unoccupied houses, but the themes of furious reproach are wide and overlapping. In specific terms, they involve a housing shortage, atomic energy, the mili-tary and, recently, El Salvador. More generally, and less articulate ly, there is also disgust with the consumer society, with politicians and with a life that, rather than as promised, seems to be bringing only narrower perspectives.

39 Separate Incidents Over the weekend, by a state television network's count, there was violence involving young peo-ple and their anger with authority in 18 West German cities, most of them in sympathy with the squatters. In West Berlin, there were 39 separate incidents after a call for violence by a leftist newspaper, including a botched attempt to set the Reichstag on fire, an attack on a building concern owned by the West German trade unions, another on a property owners' association, and 30 arrests.

In Bremen, following a demonstration against atomic energy, the police seized 24 youths and charged them with smashing show windows of banks, department stores and other businesses. The battles included one in Hamburg involving police with attack dogs and youths armed with high-powered slingshots, steel balls and bolts. There were more arrests Monday morning. The police in Munich took 43 young people into custody after they had occupied an abandoned two-story private house for seven hours.

All this has made the established political parties extremely nervous because the signs are that the movement is accelerating. The expectation of more unemployment. better spring weather and plans for new mass demonstrations, involving such issues as the presence of U.S. atomic weapons in West Ger-

Workers Hurt In Clash With Polish Police

By Brian Mooney

Reuters
WARSAW — Riot police broke up a meeting of workers in the northern Polish city of Bydgoszcz Thursday night. It was the first case of major police intervention since Poland plunged into crisis nearly nine months ago.

Officials of Solidarity, the free trade union, said that police beat up "scores of people," and that a number of them had been hospitalized, including one of their national leaders, Jan Rulewski.

The governor of the northeast-ern Polish province of Suwalki, meanwhile, resigned Thursday af-ter workers declared a strike alert in his region, close to the Soviet border, state television reported.

The report said that there was tension in the province, where leaders of Solidarity were protest-ing against the refusal of local authorities to turn over a seven-story Communist Party building for use in the health service,

The same report said that workers in the copper-ricb Legnica region were demanding changes in the local leadership, the latest in a series of popular revolts against party and government officials in the provinces.

The trouble in Bydgoszcz hegan after local government officials and Solidarity activists refused to obey a police order to leave the Bydgoszcz government headquar-ters when they were about to discuss the question of a free trade union for farmers who have been occupying a building in the city for ity union. The meeting was attended by Deputy Premier Stanislaw Mach and during the session a new local governor was appointed.

More Rationing Considered

Solidarity officials said that the question of Rural Solidarity was raised and that Mr. Mach and other local deputies then left the building. A number of deputies remained inside with Solidarity and farmer activists, and the police then gave an ultimatum calling on them to leave, they said.

This was apparently ignored, and uniformed men moved in and forcibly evicted people inside.

In Warsaw, the Polish news agency said that the government was considering the rationing of flour and grain products in addition to meat and sugar.

It said that the proposal, which would exclude bread, was being discussed with the unions in a move to prevent further shortages and hoarding. Meat rationing is due to begin on April 1. State radio had said that leaders

Solidarity in Suwalki had threatened a two-bour warning strike next Thursday and further strikes on April 1 if the govern-ment failed to send a delegation to discuss their grievances.

The problem of fixing mutually acceptable limits for fish catches could flare into a major row if French President Valery Giscard

MOSCOW - A monthlong sport in the issuance of exit visas to Soviet Jews seeking to emigrate appears to have stopped as abruptly as it began, according to Jewish activists and Western sources in close touch with the situation. After jumping from a rate of less than 1,000 a month to an estimated 2,000 to 2,500 in February, the number of permits granted by the visa office for Moscow has declined in the first half of March to its former level, these sources report-

There was some hope in Jewish circles that the decline would be temporary. A number of Jews who had been summoned to the visa office were told when they arrived there to go bome and wait for au-other call. They said it was explained to them that the surge in permits was putting a strain on customs facilities — departing Jews must submit to rigorous customs inspection — and that it had been decided to go slower until the bottleneck was cleared.

BANGUI, Central African Republic — President David Dacko has been narrowly re-elected for a six-year term as Central African head of state, the supreme court announced here Thursday.

Mr. Dacko, who came to power in a French-backed coup 18 months ago, won 374,027, or 50.23 percent of the 744,688 votes in last Sunday's ballot, the court said. According to the supreme court ties were seeking to improve their image in Madrid at the final phase of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe. Another was that the Russians were sending a signal to Washington of their readiness to be more forthcoming on the issue of Jewish emigration in return for early talks on arms control and trade. A third hypothesis was that the authorities were doing what they could to assure calm within the Jewish community during the 26th Communist Party Congress, which was held in Moscow from Feb. 23 to March 3. It was reasoned that a would-be Jewish emigrant, hearing that other Jews were being let out in large numbers, would be more likely to stay clear of demonstra-tions and other forms of political activity, so as not to spoil his own chances of leaving.

Today, on the basis of what has happened, the first two theories appear to bave lost some of their plausibility. The congress was barely over, diplomatic sources reported, when the rate of visa issuance fell back to less than 250 a week, from what, in February, had been a weekly rate of 500 or more.

Sihanouk Sees No Hope Of Anti-Vietnamese Front

By Henry Kamm New York Times Service

PEKING — Prince Norodom Sihanouk, Cambodia's former chief of state, says that his talks last week with Khieu Samphan, the political leader of the Khmer Rouge forces, convinced him that there was no bope of forging an alliance against the Vietnamese occupation of Cambodia.

Prince Sihanouk, who was interviewed Wednesday by telephone at his palace in exile in Pyongyang, North Korea, on the 11th anniversary of his overthrow, said the former Communist regime had rejected any guarantee of security for the non-Communists whose suport they are seeking.

"They say they have given np Communism, but they are not sincere," Prince Sihanouk said, "The Khmer Rouge do not want to give the slightest guarantee of security to the population that they will not again begin their massacres. They do not even want to change the label. They still want to call Cambodia 'Democratic Kampuchea. They do not want to return to the old flag, the old national anthem."

Token of Sincerity Before the meeting in Pyongyang, Prince Sihanouk demanded, as a token of sincerity, that the Khmer Rouge renounce the changes in style and nomenclature that marked their regime. The Khmer Rouge, with Pol Pot as pre-mier and Khieu Samphan as presi-dent, ruled from 1975 until the Viennamese drove them from power in 1979 and installed the present Communist government of President Heng Samrin.

government Prince Sihanouk's comments in the 45-minute telephone interview contradicted Khieu Samphan's affirmation on his return to Peking that a measure of agreement for a common front had been reached.

At the root of the dispute, Prince Sihanouk said, is the intention of the Khmer Rouge and China in continue to fight until the Viemamese have been driven from Cambodia. In Prince Sihanouk's view, the solution must be politi-cal, because Cambodians are too traumatized by years of suffering to continue such a war and because the forces that could be mustered would be inadequate for a military victory.

This move by Mr. Reagan's advisers fits into a pattern of behind-the-scenes strains between the White House and the State Department. Officials at the department, for example, are complaining privately that the staff of the National Security Council has created a bottleneck for materials sent to the White House.

White House dissatisfaction with the State Department system of preparation centered on several key points: the volume of the written material presented to Mr. Reagan, the lateness of its arrival and the lack of consultation with McCann, president of the Foundathe complete Cabinet.

Whither U.S. Foreign Policy?

There was a revealing exchange on Capitol Hill this week between Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and Rep. Benjamin Rosenthal, D-N.Y. The congressman, a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, told the secretary that he was having a difficult time figuring ont what U.S. for-eign policy was. He said that the best he could tell, the Reagan administration's policy was reactive. "What are the things we stand for?" he asked. He said he wasn't sure what the administration's priorities were. And then he accused the Reaganites, who are 60 days into their term, of doing what they swore up and down they wouldn't do — zigg-

ing and zagging.

Secretary Haig answered with artfully obtuse banalities in the syntactically original style he affects in his public remarks. "I think I recognize very clearly from where you come," he told the representative from New York. He went on to say that, "we've seen Soviet illegal interventionism increasing at a proclivity that is increasingly placing world peace in jeopardy. And so I would suggest that the emphasis should be translated from your question to suggest that we are vitally interested in maintaining world peace and

Here, here! Who isn't vitally interested in preserving world peace and stability? And who would question that the foremost threat to peace is the Soviet Union? But that probably wasn't quite what Mr. Rosenthal had in mind. The secretary of state's answer lacked specificity. It did not order U.S. foreign policy priorities. It did not spell out in detail what the United States was for. And it did not explain all the zigging and zagging.

This administration was going to speak with one voice to avoid contradictions. But President Reagan's men are now learning that that is easier said than done. The most recent example of failure to follow the party line comes from Richard Pipes, the National Security Council expert on the Soviet Union. He was reported to have said that war was inevitable if the Soviet Union didn't change its system, that detente was dead and that West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher was susceptible to Soviet pressure. The State Department promptly disavowed his remarks. Before that we had Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger speaking out in favor of the neutron bomb and Navy Secretary John Lehman against observing the provisions of SALT-1 and SALT-2. Both were shot down. Next came acting Assistant Secretary of State John Bushnell chiding the press for overplaying El Salvador. Mr. Haig quickly reversed that position and Mr. Bushnell may have lost a chance at a good ambassadorship in the process.

Ambiguity abounds, as well. Under what circumstances would the United States use force against Cuba? Where does the United States stand on Pakistan's efforts to build a nuclear weapon? How much aid is the Unit-ed States prepared to give Afghans fighting to remove the Red Army from their country? Will the United States sell AWACS to Saudi Arabia, thereby dramatically affecting the Mideast power balance? Does the United States plan to insinuate a ground force into the Middle East in the guise of a Sinai peacekeeping mission? How does the United States propose to counter the Soviet menace in the Gulf?

Those are the kinds of questions Mr. Rosenthal would probably like answered. So

INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE.

More Than Mere Numbers

It's more than a routine statisticians' quarrel over President Reagan's budget numbers. There's a genuinely radical element in his fiscal policy — a deliberate rejection of past rules and conventions. Orthodox economics carries on a careful sifting of recent experience, to identify the controlling patterns. Orthodox economics concedes that the patterns sometimes change, but holds that experience is the only real guide - and, most of the time, a pretty accurate one. The Reagan administration disagrees. Recent experience isn't relevant to its plans, it argues, because it intends to lift the economy out of the accustomed track altogether.

That's the heart of the brief run-in the other day between Mr. Reagan and the Congressional Budget Office. The CBO is a technical staff that does fiscal analysis for both houses of Congress, and it has become a target of some of Mr. Reagan's more enthusiastic supporters. Its methods tend to be orthodox, and don't give much room to the radical vision. That's where the trouble arises.

A federal budget requires a lot of informed guesses about the state of the economy a year or two ahead. The inflation rate sets the costof-living adjustments for the Social Security checks, and the interest rates set the cost of the federal debt. The unemployment rate drives up the cost of unemployment insurance and welfare. Any budget begins with a set of economic assumptions.

On Monday, the Senate Budget Committee made public some preliminary figures from the CBO's annual budget analysis. It showed spending at least $20 billion higher than Mr. Reagan had estimated. On Tuesday, responding to a question, Mr. Reagan called the CBO numbers "phony." Then, cooling, he amended that remark to say that their assumptions differed from his. And that's exactly right.

The Reagan administration is betting that its economic program can transform the way Americans think about money, inflation and investment. The administration shrugs off the criticism that its figures don't fit together. The White House and the Treasury are saying that they don't intend to manage the economy in the usual fashion. They intend to change Americans' economic behavior in fundamental ways.

The key difference involves anticipation. By changing the national atmosphere, the administration insists, it can induce people to behave in ways that anticipate changes still years ahead. Orthodox economics agrees that a tax cut can increase investment, but says that the cut has to take effect before investment responds. The Reagan plan holds that the effect can precede the cause.

Under the Reagan tax plan, tax rates for most taxpayers would actually be a little higher this year than in 1980, because inflation will push incomes up about 10 percent while tax rates are cut only 5 percent. Under the Reagan plan, tax rates in 1982 return only to approximately the 1980 level. But, the plan says, the prospect of larger cuts in the future will begin to stimulate better economic performance immediately. Investment today will begin to raise productivity only slowly, over the years. But the plan holds that the prospect of it will begin to bring inflation and interest rates down at once. Mr. Reagan is seeking to establish an idea of the future that will change the present.

It's not impossible. But it's not plausible, either, and the pragmatists in Congress are likely to change it substantially. It's an unusually interesting case of one of the great themes of politics, the collision between an expansive, romantic hope and the doubts of experienced skeptics.

Value of Space Shuttle

The most common public reference to space these days is "We can put a man on the moon, but we can't even ... " And a growing number of Americans decry the monumental sums of public money needed to underwrite our exploration of space.

There's no arguing that space travel is expensive. Some NASA engineers are saying that the true operating cost of the U.S. space shuttle program will be $40 million to $50 million per flight. While that seems at first like an astronomical outlay, the benefits promise to be enormous.

Although not commonly known, the shuttle plan requires a bigger step forward in technology than did our lunar orbits or moonwalks. It is nearly impossible to count the ways or measure the impact that our early space program has had upon our total technological know-how. And, although there will be untold benefits derived from our space shuttle program, early returns include breakthroughs in all forms of telecommunications, weather reporting, navigation systems for ships and aircraft, mapping satellite photography for finding and managing earth resources and a wide variety of experimentation in engineering and the physical

The shuttle program also promises to have :. an impact upon planetary research.

In short, Columbia's maiden voyage, as both a rocket ship and a glider, will be far from an anti-climatic postscript to the U.S. space program.

WASHINGTON - A dispatch from Manila reports that further investigation shows that many women and children were saved in the fight between U.S. forces and Moro ootlaws in the crater of the Bajo volcano. The Americans, it is said, tried in every way possible to prevent the killing of the women and children, most of whom perished as a result of long-range shell fire. The attack on the volcano was delayed for six months, during which time the U.S. governor vainly tried to induce the outlaws to surrender. It is stated that many peaceful Moros aided the Americans. This entirely alters the aspect of the engagement which has brought so much criticism upon Mr. Roosevelt's administration.

Russia: Thinking About Imperialism (I)

By John Kenneth Galbraith

WASHINGTON - There V could be comfort of a sort these days in finding one subject on which the United States and the Soviet Union, or more precisely their governments, agree. And there is; it is that imperialism is the greatest international ambition and consequent threat of our time. Each government routinely accuses the other of imperial design - of present effort and future intention to extend its influence, will and political and economie system beyond its borders and most ootably to the poor countries of Asia, Africa and Latin America. Refer-Africa and Laim America. React-ence to the imperialist powers, meaning the United States, is rou-tine in Soviet official expression. In an early Cabinet meeting, President Reagan is reported as proposing that reference to the Soviet Empire become the cormal usage. During Secretary of State Alexan-der M. Haig's confirmation proceedings, the more common reference was to Soviet expansionism. This can be taken as a synonym reflecting the tendency to convert anything that is morally unaccept-

Least Successful

But if, indeed, the Soviet Union and the United States are engaged in an imperial competition, it is surely the least successful in all history. In the last 20 years both have lost influence and suffered grave reverses beyond their bor-ders. At most the effort has been ders. At most the effort has been to see who can lose what is called imperial power the least rapidly. By any calculation we have been losing less rapidly in this respect than the Soviets; and the largest part of our loss of influence has been the works of deliberate policy. been the result of deliberate policy of a well-considered effort to build up the economic and political independence of other lands. We are oow, in some measure, surprised by the results of our own

I would like to turn first to the Soviet imperial achievement or oonachievement of these last two decades. Then in a second article I will come to the U.S. performance. And finally I will suggest the rea-sons, surprisingly similar in the main, why the external influence of both of the superpowers has been in decline, one obvious reason being that what is now called imperialism bears only the most pallid relationship to the forthright exercise of such authority in earlier

The year 1960 is a very good one on which to begin. World War II had been over for 15 years; its physical ravages had been repaired; the postwar pattern of in-ternational power and influence cemed fully established and totally stable; in that year, or more exactly a few months later, I became the servant of U.S. imperialism as the ambassador to India. In 1960, any imperial strategist in Moscow, looking ont on the world scene and ignoring some possible developing flaws, could only have reacted with the most intense satisfaction. The Soviet Union, incomparably the greatest power in Europe, was united geographically and in pobtical and economic faith and system with China, the greatest power in Asia. Along the western marches, in turn, was a seemingly faithful band of Communist states — East Germany, Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Romania, Bulgaria, as well as the independent but still stolidly Communist state of Yugoslavia and the terra incognita of Albania. Similarly to the east the writ ran on to North Korea and North Vietnam. One marvels now to think of it: an imperium, as seemed, extending from the it seemed, extending from the Brandenburg Gate to the port of Haiphong. There had been nothing like it since Genghis Khan or, as the Russians might prefer, Rome itself. Quite possibly this structure was more impressively solid when viewed from the outside than from within. In any case, all U.S. references were to the Sino-Soviet blocking these wears Sagnetary of State in those years Secretary of State Dean Rusk characterized China as a "Soviet Manchukuo" devoid of any of the essential aspects of sov-ereignty. All sovereignty belonged

But there was yet more. In Indonesia, Sukarno was backed by a large and powerful Communist Party. Egypt, the most influential country of the Arab world, was recipient of an increasing flow of Soviet arms and advisers. As was Ben Bella in Algeria. There was support to Kwame Nkrumah in est single part, about a third of the Ghana. In Italy and France, huge Communist Parties seemed in imfinement that, by either the French or his own people, was his near-lifetime career. Mr. Nkrumah, unpeccable subordination to Soviet command. Similarly smaller ones elsewhere. More important, perwisely absent from his country, haps, was the feeling everywhere in the poor lands that socialism was on the wave of the future. How was ousted. And in the poor countries of the world socialism has ceased to be the glowing alterna-tive to poverty — given the terrible weight of the latter, one might only wish that it were. As Marx himself on the wave of the future. How could it be otherwise? Capitalism had not served to break the terrible bonds of poverty. There must be an alternative; the only available one was socialism or communism. Moscow, not Washington (or New York), had custody of the future. foresaw, socialism becomes an alternative only after the arrival of capitalism. It is a point to which I will return.

Expansion

Against all this has been the Communist expansion — in Afghanistan to rescue a failing Marxist regime, a country as inhospit-able to imperialism in the last two centuries as any in the world. And in Angola, where the MPLA re-gime is sustained by Cuban sol-diers and, in a possibly much more practical way, by revenues from Gulf oil. And in Ethiopia, where, as Evelyn Waugh once observed, the writ of governments has never run reliably very much beyond the airport, in his day the railway station. As a bastion of Communism, Ethiopia is in exchange for Somalia, an earlier bastion of communism,now an outpost of the free world. Such is the 20-year record of the Soviet Empire. Expansion-ism indeed!

In cootrast with that of the Sovi- ington Post.

et Union, the 20-year record of the United States looks almost heroic. We were expelled from Indochina, but Indochina is a long way from being China. As the Russians suf-fered in Egypt, so did we in Iran. Elsewhere U.S. influence has yielded to the discovery of the OPEC countries that they could charge what the market would bear, some-thing that should not have been a great surprise to a capitalist country, an opportunity that could have been discovered from a reading of our better economic textbooks.

And, as in the case of Brazil, Mexico and perhaps even India, our influence has suffered from the growing self-confidence that goes with industrial (or agricultural) development. Most of all, it has suffered from the highly successful development of our advanced in-dustrial allies and friends. But all this, as noted, we have sought. With all these countries we remain on reasonably friendly terms. U.S. disasters have been only in countries, South Vietnam and Iran, where we attempted a much closer military and political embrace. To a further contemplation of the U.S. imperial record over the last 20 years I return in a further arti-

Those are the arguments. The facts, as they bave begun to emerge in congressional hearings are different. It is clear now that the Reagan cuts would hurt people who by any definition are occily and would spare juicy targets among the better-off. And the de-cisions on what to cut were not so much economie as political. Consider this amazing fact: The United States government oow spends about $1 billion a year on health payments to elderly persons who have annual incomes of more than $30,000. Is the Reagan administration proposing any cuts in or ceiling on those payments to the non-poor? No. The figures on Medicar recipients and their in-comes appeared in a fascinating story by David E. Rosenbaum in The New York Times. About I million Americans over 65 have incomes above $30,000, he wrote. On average they get $1,000 a year in Medicare payments. Of course many rely on that money. But in a world of financial limits they are not "truly needy."

The same story told about a hus-

Richard Schweiker, the secretary of health and human services, was asked on a television program what would happen to them under the Reagan program. They "wouldn't have to worry about being cut," he replied, because they were "a classic case of ... the truly needy."

But administration budget experts said the family would lose at least $6 a week for each child in school, under Reagan proposals to cut food stamps for children get-ting free school lunches. Assuming four children in school, the family would lose $24 a week in food stamps: a painfully significant amount for people who scrimp to get along on beans and macaroni.

Striking Contrast

That family, and others like it, would not lose only food stamps. The Reagan budget proposes cuts in fuel assistance for the poor. Grants to the states for welfare, Medicaid and other programs. Administration spokesmen fence with the figures, but there can no longer be any doubt that some truly des-perate Americans will be worse

Public assistance programs are not sacrosanct. But there is a strik-ing contrast between those budget cuts and ones that Mr. Reagan chose not to make — a contrast in both equity and amount. For example, there is wide-spread, nonpartisan concern about tors proposed that the payments be pegged instead to prevailing wage rates. That change would save $3.8 billion a year — more than twice the $1.8 billion the administration wants to cut from food stamps. When the senators took the idea to the president, he rejected it out of hand. He had made a campaign promise, be explained, not to change the cost-of-living increases. The reason, in short, was political.

When Mr. Reagan campaigned, he did not talk about cutting food stamps or making most of the other substantive reductions he has now proposed. He spoke of saving what had to be saved by ending "waste." In office, he decided he had to make real domestic cuts to allow for a huge rise in defense spending. And he naturally avoided targets among those likely to be part of his constituen-

None of this is surprising Mr. Reagan and David Stockman can say, fairly enough, that they have no political hope of changing the budget if they take on the pilots and the Medicare recipients and the pensioners. geous subsidies and in programs that are really out of control.

The realities of the Reagan program, as they become clear, also caution against rushed congressional action. Under the guise of economics, the administration is trying to rush through a good deal of ideology: not just in cutting this budget of that but in eliminating whole programs repeatedly authorwhole programs repeatedly authorized by Congress, such as legal services for the poor.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynilian,

The Paris Stage

Brook's 'Cherry Orchard' Blossoms

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss International Herald Tribune DARIS - "The Cherry Orc-

I hard is a play always in sea-son. George Moore described it as the most perfect work of art of the modern theater and added that the genius of Anton Chekhov had brought George Bernard Shaw and himself into agreement for the first and last time. To fully appreciate the haunting beauty and life sense of this masterpiece it is necessary to see it on the stage. Peter Brook at the Bouffes du Nord is offering an opportunity in a faithful translation by Jean-Claude Carriere:

In the Brook mise-en-scene it is played not on the traditional boards but in open space. There is no scenery, and the German governess' dog is disappointingly missing. Its Ur-production by Stanislavsky, usually slavishly imtated, was in the naturalistic manner: the rooms of the rambling Russian country house in exacting replica, with real hay brought on to perfume the outdoor scene and with the cherry garden in blossom visible through the tall windows of the former nursery. These appointments were helpful, but they are not indispensable. The play's the thing, and Brook sets it before us magically and movingly.

Chekhov's tragicomedy points to inevitable social change. In the Russia of the '90s, nouveau-riche peasants are buying up the estates of the impoverished upper classes, planning to turn the acquired properties to huge profit. The idling country gentry are defenseless in the economic battle. Humor and pathos mingle as they lose all, crass materialism holding the trump cards.

Such is the drama's obbligato, but its incidents center on the contrasting of the characters, and what a treasury of portraits the play contains — from the tottering old butler to the rejected elder daughter of the family, longing in vain for a marriage proposal, and from the seedy student tutor with his bopes of impossible tomorrows to the affected housemaid and the comic hangers-on. Brook has assembled an able company. Natasha Parry is Madame Ranevsky, the dreamy lady who owns the doomed enerry orchard, and there is a radiance to her taking of the role that was created by Chekhov's wife, Olga Knipperby Chekhov's wife, Uga ramppa-Chekhova, and has been memorably acted since by Tarassova and Nazimova. Parry lacks the emotional volume of her famous forerunners, but her charming presence lights the impersonation with a warming glow.

Michel Piccoli plays her doddering brother with beguiling insouci-ance, Anne Consigny has April freshness as the idealistic young daughter and Nathalie Nell the proper sad resignation as the elder, and there is a delicious bit by Maurice Benichon as the upstart valet. The evening at the Bouffes do Nord is one of an abiding rapture, the great play again casting its spell of sweet lament for the passing present.

The Comedie-Française is reviv-ing "Sertorius" for the first time since 1804. Concerned with the struggles for dominance over the Roman Empire a century before the birth of Christ, it was written by Corneille in 1661. Though a product of the antumn of his career, its majesty of style reveals him in full flower. In 1804, Talma played its Pompee at the Comedie, but in 1806. Napoleon, fearing that the text by inference reflected on his rule and on his envisioned divorce from Josephine, banned the play. During the 20th century it has had but two stagings, one by university students, though some of its passages are known to every French schoolchild.

The aged general, Sertomus, stationed in Spain, is opposed to Syl-la, who has seized power in Rome. The Spanish queen, Viriate, and the aristocratie Roman, Aristie, would make matrimonial alliances with him, but, though he loves the queen, military duty — in typical Corneillian conflict — prevents such unions. He is assassinated and it is Pompee with his youthful audacity who rids the empire of its tyrant and restores his land to lib-

The play is one of cumulative power. It unfolds in a leisurely way, then its tempo increases to reach a stunning climax.

Michel Etcheverry's Sertorius is an intelligent interpretation of Claire Vernet's Aristie and Cathe-rine Ferran's Viriate contribute worthy companion pieces. Domi-nique Rozen's characterization of the loathsome, treacherous Perpenna is chillingly sinister. Jose-Maria Flotats, making his debut at the Comedie-Francaise, is an actor of sonorous delivery and impressive presence. His inheritance of Talma's classic mantle promises a hrilliant future.

15,000 Expected at 'Wonder Wafer' Procession Isom:

By Jules B. Farber

MSTERDAM - To celebrate a legend-A ary 636-year-old miracle, thousands of Dutch Catholics will assemble at midnight Saturday in the Begijnhof, an enclave of medieval almshouses, to walk for four hours in the 100th modern Stille Omgang (Silent Pro-

The annual Stille Omgang was begun in the mid-14th century, soon after the miracle is said to have occurred, and attracted hordes of European pilgrims until it was banned in 1578 when the city went over to the Protestant prince of Orange's side during the Re-

According to the legend, on March 15, 1345, a priest gave the last tites to a man in Kalverstraat. The man did not die, but vomited. A woman caring for him threw the vomit into the hearth, then discovered that it had taken the shape of the wafer given by the priest during the Eucharist. She reached into the fire and, without burning her hand, re-moved the wafer, which was cool and unmarked. She placed it in a house shrine and ran for the priest, who took it into his

But the wafer reappeared in the house shrine, causing a sensation in town. In a great procession, the wafer was carried to the Oude Kerk (Old Church). The next day, the wafer was mysteriously back in the house shrine. Pilgrims came from all over Europe after official church proclamations recognized the miracle.

After the Reformation, small groups of Catholics sometimes walked what they believed was the route followed by the pilgrims at the end of "Miracle Week." On the first Wednesday after March 14th, the "Amster-dam miracle" was celebrated in local Cathohe churches and on the following Saturday at midnight, the procession was held.

A century ago, two Amsterdammers, C.A.J. Elsenburg and J.J. Lousbergh, found the authentic route in church archives. They set off with a few friends, and the numbers grew over the decades to several thousand

In 1347 the house in Kalverstraat — the legend does not reveal the fate of its "dying" tenant - was demolished to build the Heilige Stede Kapel (Chapel of the Holy Place). The Stille Omgang got under way as an annual tradition. In the city fires of 1421 and 1452, the chapel was destroyed but was rebuilt each time in more glorious form — and the legendary wafer reportedly always emerged unscathed, though it was later lost.

Fireplace Found

The chapel served Protestant parishioners from 1590 to 1890, when it was closed because of deterioration. When it was demol ished in 1908, the wreckers uncovered the fireplace where the miracle reportedly occurred. Another church was opened in 1912

Massenet's 'Cendrillon' Is Real Cinderella Story

International Herald Tribune

PARIS — In a singular example of cultural feedback, the season of 19th-century French opera at the Theatre Musical de Paris is getting a production from the Canadian National Arts Center in Ottawa of "Cendrillon," a work it recently revived after 65 years of oblivion and one, it seems, that shows a little-known facet of its prolific composer, Jules Massenet. Massenet's stock has been rising in recent years, particularly in North America, and a different picture of the composer has been emerging as the verism of "La Navarraise," the heroics of "Le Cid" and the lish exoticism of "Esclarmonde" have been placed alongside the more discreet charms of the popular "Manon."

"The first thing I thought was what's wrong with it if it hasn't been done in so long," said Brian Macdonald, the Canadian choreographer and stage director who mounted "Cendrillon" (Cinderel-la) in Ottawa in 1979. The work was unveiled successfully at the Opera Comique in 1899 but dropped out of sight by the start of World War 1. Macdonald found records of a 1914 performance un-der Sir Thomas Beecham in London, in an English-language ver-sion by, surprisingly, Ezra Pound, "which is evidence that it was treated with some importance."

Macdonald attributes the fate of "Cendrillon" to the change in taste that made the first war a watershed in the arts. "By the time Diaghilev was through with Paris tastes, Massenet got put into the refrigerator," he said. But he exwork, as have critics who heard it in Ottawa or later at the Washing- symmetrical choreographic patton (D.C.) Opera. The production is also scheduled to be taken to the New York City Opera. "When I began breaking it down, I realized how cleverly it is constructed, how the scenes breathe, how the entries are judged," Macdonald said. "This is by a real man of the theater."

Massenet found some unusual ways of dealing with this retelling of the Perrault fairy tale. It makes extensive use of ballet. Cinderella is a soprano, Prince Charming a mezzo travesty role, and the fairy godinother a coloratura — a com-bination of feminine voices that dancers singing, and I treat the godmother a coloratura - a com-

Stravinsky's 'Rite' Is Fascinating Ritu:

L ONDON — After almost 60 years, the challenge of Stravinsky's music for "The Rite of Spring" has not lost its potency for dance, even as different as it sounds in Richard Alston's oew version for Ballet Rambert. Alston has gooe back to Stravinsky's own arrangement for piano (four hands) - which was the first to be published, in 1913 — and has created a pagan ritual that is often fascinating despite the limit of oumbers the Rambert company

The definitive agreement by the two companies calls for a cash tender offer for Bache by a Prudential subsidiary within the next few days, followed by a cash merger of Bache with the subsidiary.

The Bache Group is the parent company of Bache Halsey Stuart Shields, the eighth largest brokerage house in the United States. Prudential is to offer $32 a share for Bache's 11 million outstanding shares. Bache would thus become the only brokerage house on Wall Street to be majority-owned by a company ontside the securities in-

"If Prudential buys Bache," a Wall Street executive said earlier Thursday, "the effect on banks and other financial services may be far-reaching. It may open some other brokers to similar offers. It will also speed the confrontation between banks and insurance companies to serve customers with everything you can think of."

Sources said the Prudential offer was received with considerable enthusiasm at Bache because of intense behind-the-scenes efforts to fight off an unwanted takeover by the wealthy Belzberg brothers of Vancouver, British Columbia, who have major holdings in a number of companies

Since 1979, the Belzbergs, through their First City Financial of Vancouver, have increased their holdings to 22.6 percent of Bache

At a meeting at LaGuardia Airport in New York last December, Samuel Belzberg, the president and chief executive of First City, asked Mr. Jacobs for two scats on the Bache board. The request was turned down by Bache's board nominating committee and the Belzbergs began to increase their holdings of Bache stock.

But because of government controls on the domestic price, it is in the export field that the coal divisions of the leading mining houses barvest the profits that have made them star performers in recent

Alan Scaley, chairman of the coal division at Rand Mines, a division of Barlow Rand, estimated that current export prices were running at least three times above domestic prices - even after rail and port charges. From 1979 to 1980 the price for South Africa's low-to-mediumgrade steam coal in foreign markets — mainly those of the Euro-pean Economic Community — vir-mally doubled. The price is still nsing, in part because of the diffi-culty Poland is facing in meeting commitments in Western Europe.

Developing Dependence

With U.S. exports still limited by congestion in ports, it is possi-ble that South Africa could become the leading supplier to the Common Market when it compietes the current phase of expansion of its automated and compu-terized Indian Ocean coal port, Richards Bay.

At a time when Western nations are being asked to consider coonomic sanctions against South Africa, they are quietly developing some energy dependence on the presumptive target.

Although the United States is mainly in competition with South Africa for European markets, Rand Mines has a contract for 850,000 tons over 10 years with the Gulf Power Co. of Pensacola, Fia. Richards Bay can now handle 24 million tons a year, but by the end of 1984 capacity is to be raised to 44 million tons. Last year, South African exporters wound up some of their earliest long-term coal contracts, in which the South Africans often sold at a "political discount" of up to 20 percent. This was an inducement

Drillers See Threat in U.K. Tax By Nicholas Moore

LONDON - A sharp rise in British North Sea oil taxes is causing companies to review drilling

The state's own British National Oil, sharply critical of the government tax policy, said Wednesday night it has already postponed development of one field.

Oil industry sources said Thursday more such postponements could be announced after other companies assess the impact proposed tax changes will have on the economics of developing smaller and more difficult fields. The changes, designed to take an extra £1 billion in oil revenue this year, are part of the British 1981-82 budget plan now before Parliament

Armand Hammer, chairman of Occidental Petroleum in the United States, said last week it had sent plans for a $550 million extension of its Claymore field back to the drawing board, although Mr. Hammer added that he hoped delay would be

Deep Sea Exploration

And the British subsidiary of the Royal Dutch-Shell group has said it is seriously considering re-duction of exploration in deep waters, where the new tax measures could make any discoveries economically unattractive.

The project postponed by the state oil corporation was to have exploited a small reservoir containing about 20 million barrels of recoverable

The new supplementary tax on oil and gas made this marginal deposit less attractive, the corporation's chairman, Philip Shelbourne, said in an address to the London Stock Exchange.

Mr. Shelbourne criticized the frequency of tax changes - 13 since 1974 - and the size of the tax take. Companies estimate that around 90 percent of North Sea profits can flow to the government, which will take about £6.6 billion from the North Sea this year, nearly 10 percent of all its revenue.

"I realize the importance of revenue to the government at the present time, but some moderation of their tax policy is needed to avoid killing the milk cow," Mr. Shelbourne said

The government, however, struggling to hold down public borrowing in a drive against infla-tion, argues that taxes on oil have not risen in line with crude oil prices, which have increased by 160 percent since early 1979.

Officials said the government judges that its tax

Reagan Delays Final Action on Japan Autos

From Agency Dispatches WASHINGTON - President Reagan reached a consensus with advisers on the problem of Japa-nese car imports Thursday but delayed a decision on action for about two weeks, the White House said.

The consensus was reached during a 55-minute meeting the presi-dent held Thursday morning with members of a Cabinel committee studying how the U.S. automobile industry could meet competition from Japanese manufacturers.

White House Press Secretary James Brady said the president emphasised at the meeting the United States remains committed to free trade and the government should not become entangled in the economic fortunes of any company or industry.

At the same time, the president expressed the belief that the car industry was involved in a situation not of its own making and that the government bore some degree of responsibility for helping the in-dustry back on its feet, Mr. Brady

The spokesman said the president had put off a decision because he wanted to hold further consultations with members of Congress on the problem of Japanese car imports.

Meanwhile Thursday, Foreign Minister Masayoshi ito told reporters in Tokyo that he favored automakers as long as they do not interfere with "the principle of free

Mr. Ito leaves for Washington on Saturday for Japan's first Cabi-net-level talks with the Reagan administration. He is to meet Mr. Reagan on Tuesday.

Mr. Ito said any action Japan takes to curb its car exports to the United States will apply also to the Common Market.

The U.S. task force, beaded by Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis, gave Mr. Reagan a report setting out a range of options, ineluding that of working for volun-tary Japanese export quotas.

Selling of Oil Stocks Cuts NYSE Averages

From Agency Disputches
NEW YORK — A selloff in oil, blue chip and computer stocks dragged down price averages on the New York Stock Exchange Thursday in heavy trading, despite further signs of easing interest

The oil group was hurt by a disappointing forecast of first quarter profits by Cities Service and by the growing oil glut, which bas hurt re-finery margins. The Dow Jones in-dustrial average lost 7.48 to 986.58 but advances led declines about nine to seven as volume expanded to 63 million shares from 55.74

Cities Service said its first quarter net would be "significantly below" the year ago level. Pointing up the problems of the refiners, the American Petroleum Insutute reported Thursday that gasoline stocks are at a record high.

Michael Metz of Oppenheimer said a lot of institutional investors had hoped the oils would rally with the rest of the market. Now, "it would be an embarassment to have a big position in the oils at the end of the quarter," he said. Analysis said the market contin-

U.S. Shows '80 Surplus

From Agency Dispatches
WASHINGTON — The United States in 1980 recorded its first trade surplus since 1976, the Com-merce Department reported

The department said the nation showed a $700 million current ac-count surplus in the fourth quarter of 1980 after a revised $4.5 billion surplus in the third quarter.

The department originally had reported a $4.9 billion surplus in the third quarter, after a $2.4 billion deficit in the second quarter.

The fourth quarter figures brought the current account surplus for the entire year 1980 to $100 million, compared with a $700 million deficit in 1979. The department said the quarter-to-quarter decline in the surplus largely reflected an increase to $6.1 billion in the fourth quarter merchandise trade deficit, from $2.9 billion in the third. This in turn was the result largely of a sharp increase in petroleum imports, as the level of exports remained essentially unchanged. The Council of Economic Advisers said Wednesday that the U.S. economy, propelled by a rise in automobile buying, appears to be headed for a surprisingly strong growth rate of 5 percent in this year's first quarter. But the administration continues to believe that a slowdown is developing, as indicated by the February dip in industrial production, the spokesman said.

Highlights of the year 1980

1980 was a remarkably successful year for the Group. Earnings rose, due to the expansion of our clientele throughout the year and to active bullion trading, especially in the first half. In the light of international instabilities, we increased liquidity and carefully monitored credit risk and interest rate movements. We also enlarged our capital resources, which at year end stood at over US$ 800 million. The year marked the 25th anniversary of the foundation of Trade Development Bank's predecessor, Sudafin. The bank's subsequent growth has brought it to the point where it is the largest foreign-owned bank in Switzerland and the past year was again a record one for earnings and customer deposits. The bank's equity capital at year end amounted to Sfr. 371 million. Republic New York Corporation, of which the Group owns 61%, raised its dividend twice in the year, reflecting an earnings increase of nearly 100%. At year end the equity of its subsidiary, Republic National Bank of New York, was US$ 448 million, making it the 21st largest bank in the

During the year the Group sold half its strategic gold investment at a profit of US$ 11 million. This is treated as an exceptional item in the financial statements. Since the year end the Group has sold the remainder of this investment, producing a further exceptional profit of US$ 5 million. While the Board cannot count on a repeat of the exceptional bullion trading conditions of 1980 the new year has started promisingly and the Board is recommending an increase in the regular dividend from US$ 0.75 to US$ 1.00 per share, rogether with a special 25th anniversary bonus of US$ 0.25 per share.

eign debt to escalate. Czechoslovakia made the boldest attempt to loosen the tight controls of the Soviet model in 1968. After the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia, the East Bloc countries learned the lesson: Exstive reform was not acceptable

But after the poorest five-year performance ever by the East Bloc nations, tentative steps toward reform are being made.

The key Hungarian changes restrict the anthority of central planners over state enterprises. Unlike the Soviet Union, which sets specific materials are stated to the sets of th calic output targets for every economic entity from steel mills to beauty parlors, Hungary sets genconomic goals.

Individual Methods

Individual managers then are given incentives to reach the goals and autonomy to find their own ways of reaching them.

The central plan in the Soviet model is law, and failing to follow it is a crime. In Hungary, the plan is a guide, and factories, stores and farms are supposed to make a profit or go out of business.

Three marks of Hungarian success are the rich output of coopera-tive farms with large private plots; the internal price mechanism, which has come close to reflecting true costs, and international trade which involved about half of the country's total economic product.
Still, 20 percent of the state

Northville said the pipeline would reduce the present $5-to-$6-a-barrel cost of carrying crude through the canal by about 20 per-because their payrolls are too big

The 5-year plan just concluded left the country with its goals for national income only two-thirds filled and personal incomes only half achieved. In the new plan, the targets have been reduced substan-tially.

Hungary did achieve a surplus in its balance of international hard-currency payments, a unique achievement in Eastern Europe. The beauties of Budapest and the rich Hungarian food and good wine encouraged tourism made up for a delicit in trade.

Show a Profit

The Hungarians have introduced an export pricing system that is supposed to test their factories. The domestic producers will be given the prices for competitive goods sold outside the country and told to match the prices and show a profit. This discipline is aimed at forcing managers to reduce their payrolls and improve productivity.

Managers have been given more authority to develop export prod-ucts, but they must get approval from the national bank for any borrowing to make investments. If the managers make their targets, they are awarded bonuses and various fringe benefits. A sign that reform was getting top priority again was the emer-gence of Rezno Nyers. Published statements by Mr. Nyers indicated that he is again in official favor. Mr. Nyers was considered the key architect of economic reform until be was dropped from the party Politburo five years ago.

'Act With People'

"It is not enough to put central decisions into effect with the interests of the people in mind," he said, "Now, we have to act together with the people. "From now on, people must increasingly participate in decisionmaking on various levels."

Mr. Nyers, like many other reformers, says that Hungary's heavy trade with Comecon countries is a drag on economic growth.

The price Hungary received for its exports lagged 20 percent behind its import costs, Selling in Comecon is particularly difficult because the different national currencies can neither be exchanged nor converted to hard currence which makes price-setting very difficult

But Budapest has one advantage it exports corn and wheat, for which there are world prices set in

While annual trade agreements between Comecon countries must be balanced bilaterally, the countries can sell goods outside the agreements for hard currency.

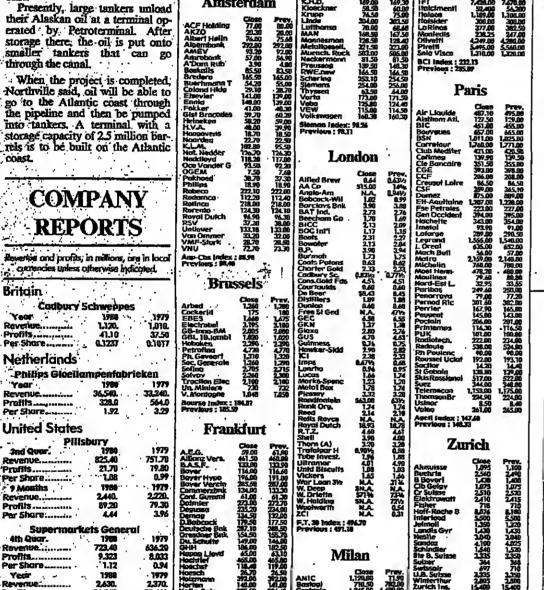

And Hungary has excelled at this kind of deal. Within a few years planners expect Budapest to more trade denominated in dollars than in rubles.

Ah, the food in Europe! It's really something else. You'll sample the kinds of treats you wish you could share with the folks you left behind. So make their mouths water. Give 'em a call. But be sure to check these mark-saving tips first.

SAVE ON SURCHARGES Many hotels outside the U.S. charge exorbitant surcharge fees on international calls. And sometimes the fees are greater than the cost of the call itself. But if your hotel has TELEPLAN, the way to keep hotel surcharges reasonable, go ahead and call No Teleplan? Read on!

SAVE WITH A SHORTIE In most countries there's no threeminute minimum on self-dialed calls.

There are other ways to save money.

So if your hotel offers International Dialing from your room, place a short call home and have them call you back. The surcharge on short calls is low. And you pay for the callback from the States with dollars. not local currency, when you get your next home or office phone bill.

SAVE THESE OTHER WAYS Telephone Company credit card and collect calls may be placed in many countries. And where they are, the hotel surcharges on such calls are usually low. Or, you can avoid surcharges altogether by calling from the post office or from other telephone centers.

SAVE NIGHTS & WEEKENDS Always check to see whether the country you're in has lower rates at night and on weekends. Usually the savings are considerable.

Have you digested that! O.K. Now pass the mustard!

"NOW CALM DOWN, HENRY! HOW WOULD HE KNOW IT WAS A TWENTY DOLLAR HAT?"

BOOKS

THE LONE PILCRIM By Laurie Colwin. Knopf. 211 pp. $9,95. Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

TN "Happy All the Time," her recent novel, Laurie Colvin wrote about successful love, that grand surprise. In "The Lone Pilgrim," her new collection of stories, she writes about some of the unsuccessful aspects. "Love, in its initial stages," a character says, "takes care of everything." After that, the lovers discover that it is they themselves who have to take care of everything, Love, Colwin reminds us. involves an immense amount of trouble. It is, in both a positive and a negative sense, a disturbance of the DEACE.

Some years ago, Denis de Rougemont wrote a very good book called "Love in the Western World." In "The Lone Pilgrim," Laurie Colwin is writing a fictional anatomy of love that is confined to the United States now. De Maupassant and Colette come to mind, also La Rochefoucauld and Vauvenargues, for Colvin has a flair for aphorism. "Fulfillment," she writes, "leaves an empty space where your old self used to be." Of two lovers married to other people, she observes: "They would never have love's greatest luxury: time. They would never own anything in common or travel together." "A love affair is like a shot arrow," a character says. "It gives life an intense direction, if only gives life an intense direction, if only for an instant."

Love and Yearn In a story called "Sentimental Memory," a happily married woman meets with a former lover and with a despairing insight; "I was, I discovered, capable of adultery." One is tempted to ask: if love doesn't protect you against love, what hope is there for the world? Quite a few women in The Lone Pilgrim" discover that they are capable of adultery, and Colwin seems to be writing a much-needed catechism for them. Sometimes adultery is as simple as breathing, and sometimes it is as simple as dying,

"Someone is going to get cheated

Breezy, witty cliche, to be sure, but nevertheless another story about a housewife reduced to childishness by her husband's fixation on the world of professional sports. And this impression is only strengthened when, in the chapters that follow, Frank forces Jan to serve Saturday night dinner to two football tackles and a running back, who spend the evening telling offen-sive stories about women, and then abandons her first thing Sunday morning to have breakfast at the Palm Court with a pole vaulter. But when Miss Whedon, whose first novel was the talented "Girl of the Golden West," pulls a surprising switch. On Monday, Jan accompanies Frank to a sports-magazine award luncheon in honor of a basketball star named Nat Spacth whom Frank is supposed to be writing a book about. Nat turns out to be altogether differ-ent from what Jan expected. Shortly after meeting her, he asks her for help with a recipe he is supposed to cook on a television show that some publicity man has arranged for him to be

Orioles' Murray: A Well-Kept $1-Million Secret

By Thomas Boswell Washington Post Service

MIAMI — It's Eddie Murray's way to keep his guard up and his chin tucked in. The worst thing you can do," he says, "is get people gunning for you."
That's why he's baseball's best-kept, million-dollar-a-year secret. Even Murray's Baltimore Oriole teammates often are sbocked at how little they know about him. A huzz went through the clubhouse bere this week when the team got its annual vision checkup. Murray failed his.

Rite of Spring

The first baseman's right eye, the one that had the orbital bone fractured by a bad-hop grounder last summer, tested at a subpar 20/30, and had a floating speck in the field of vision. Said the doctor: Young man, you need glasses."
Was he going blind?

"No." said Murray, mis-chievously. "Every spring, they tell me I can't see, so I guess they're right. But I can see a baseball well enough to hit it."

If Murray's vision ever gets to normal, they can shut down the American League for the summer. What would he do if be could see? With Murray, the first question stop improving? He has been a pro for eight seasons, four in the majors. His runs-hatted-in progression: 32, 65, 68, 86, 88, 95, 99, 116. Each spring, Murray is asked his goal. Each year, he answers, "Get better." And he does.

in baseball's century, the Murray case is, in one respect, unique. No one else has ever started out well (rookie of the year), then gotten better in every phase of the game in every season. Average: 283, 285, 295, 300, Runs: 81, 85, 90, 100. Hits: 173, 174, 179, 186. Strikeouts: 104, 96, 78, 71. Runs produced: 140, 153, 164, 184.

Murray is not the best young player ever, or even close to it. Joe DiMaggio, at the same stage, from age 21 to 24, averaged 140 RBIs a year and Ted Williams' composite batting average was 358. But Murray is the only player to show such across-the-board improvement in each of his first four full seasons.

Murray's second-half numbers for 1980 suggest a possible next plateau. Those figures were: 80 games, 325, 20 homers, 67 RBIs. Double them figures and you've got vintage Hank Aaron. "I really have no logical expla-

He's a natural righty, bu) he gets twice as many at-bats left-handed and it wasn't until last year that all his stats were better hatting left-hand-

"But," added Weaver, grinning. what it prohably means is that Eddie's learning more about the pitchers every year than they're learning about him."

That's certainly the way Murray would want it. "I think Eddie would prefer it if he got no attention at all," says Coach Elrod Hendricks. Comments teammate Ken Singleton: "When Eddie Murray finally levels off at about 150 RBIs a year, maybe he'll not poticed." a year, maybe be'll get noticed."

"I'm not into publicity." says Murray. "Some need it, some don'i. I'm not wild about the money, either. But if it's playing base-ball you're talking about. I don't know how I could be having any more fun."

In countless ways, Murray effaces himself. He is quiet around friends and stone silent around strangers. Under the tutelage of an mation," says Manager Earl expert. Lee May. Murray ouickly uniform less dirty than Murray. If Weaver of Murray. "Maybe it's because he hroke in young without a but unterly useless — "yes-no" interview.

Even when it is his turn to hit, he dawdies in the dugout and usually gets into the on-deck circle one pitch late - materializing when no one is watching

Student

Murray, 25, is a natural student of minutiae, the perfect ballplayer's temperament. For instance, how do his two stances left- and right-handed — differ? "I don't have two stances," he says. "I have about six. I move my feet. shift my weight. The first rule about baseball is, 'Adjust, then readjust.'

Murray pretends his theory of hitting is trivial. "I just see the ball and hit it," is his standard answer. What he really thinks is: "Each vear. I've cut down swinging at bad pitches outside the strike zone. Now, I'm working on not swinging at bad pitches that are strikes. You have to take the pitcher's strike and swing at yours."

For Murray, no camouflage is 100 much. Of his hase-running, he says, "I'm sneaky." Sneaky enough to steal home to win a game in the 12th inning. No player gets his 10 him. When he makes a run-saving scoop of a low throw at first base, he does it quickly, disdainfully, and then lopes off the field as if bored to death.

هكذا من الأصل

A common perception is that Murray's too nonchalant — an underachiever living off-his talent. Why doesn') he ever make a "hus-ling" play? Why doesn') he ever get hurt, playing in 638 of 643 games? Why does he stand at the plate laughing after the pitcher fools him? Why does he never show anger or disappointment — even when he went 0-for-21 in the 79 World Series? The answer is that Murray seldom is what he seems. "He always hears it when people say he's not hustling." says Hendricks. bothers him because, outside of Earl, nobody on this team hates them, than Eddie. He has enormous pride. Nothing gets him going more than embarrassment." Always Next Time

"Earl had a hard time under-standing some things I did." says Murray. "He'd see me laughing at home plate and think I wasn't serious enough. That's just my way of saying. You got one by me. Maybe you won't next time." Now, ask Weaver who the supposedly lackadaisical Murray most reminds him of, and he says. "Frank Robinson," supposedly the most intense player of his time. "Eddie has the ability, like Frank and Reggie Jackson, to call up a special kind of concentration when i) really matters," says Weaver.

No Free Lunch

By Russell Baker

NEW YORK — President Reagan, Speaker O'Neill and David Stockman slid into a booth at Mom's for lunch. What'll it be, gents?" asked Sonny, the counterman.

"One meatball," said Stockman, "and three plates."

"You get no plates with one meatball," said

Sonny.
'This isn't ecocomy, it's ocoseose. O'Neill said. Bring me a baeoo cbeeseburger with letluce, lomato and mavo. Sonny. and french fries on the side."

Baker

"One hurger with everything and one meathall," Sonny said. "Hold the meatball," said Stockman, "and just bring me a glass of

"You get no water with oo meat-ball," Sonny said. Then, turning to President Reagan: "What's yours,

"I'll have the same as Mr. Stockman," said the president. Sonny yelled to Mom: "One hurger with everything, hold two meatballs, hold two glasses of wa-

"Hold the hacon on the cheeseburger, too," yelled Stockman, "and while you're at it, hold the french fries.

Sonny brought the cheeseburger with lettuce, tomato and mayo.

"Tip," said the president, "do you really think it's fair for Massa-chusetts to get the roll, the burger, the cheese, the lettuce, the tomato and the mayo while California and Michigan get oothing?"

"All right, I'll cut it into three sections," said the speaker. "Absolutely not," cried Stockman.

"You see, Tip," said the president, "if you understood supply-side economics, you would know that dividing a cheeseburger into equal parts for everybody can never create the incentives which society's productive people require to save more, invest more, make pro"that the big shot has to get the lion's share.' "Only in the short run," said Stockman. "After he is filled with cheeseburger, be will feel so well disposed toward the world that he will generate oew business activity which will pump out money so fast that everybody will get a lion's share. Let me show you what I mean, Mr. Speaker."

Taking the cheeseburger, he re-moved the roll and placed one half on the table in front of the presi-dent and the other half in front of himself. "Now we each have half a roll smeared with mayo," he said. "Not much incective to do a great afternoon's work, is it? So what do we do? We cut the superfluous boon out of the incentive grant by taking your knife and carefully scraping off all the mayo." Matching the deed to the word, he placed the mayonnaise-laden knife back on the speaker's plate. "Now," said the president, "all I've got is plain hread. I oeed more "So what you do," said Stock man, "is give him the cheese and the lettuce." The speaker placed cheese and lettuce on the presi-dent's half a roll, then said, "Lettuce is oo good without tomato." and gave him the tomato too.

"All I've got left is one meat-ball," said O'Neill. Sonny said, "You get no mayo with one meatball," and snatched away the mayonnaise-laden knife.

"Sonny, I think you overlooked something," Stockman called. Sonny coted the speaker's meatball on the plate and said, "You get no plate with one meathall."

"Where do I put the meathall if you take my plate?" asked O'Neill. "May I suggest," said Stockman, "that I simply slice it in two -- just like that — and place one half on the president's piece of the roll and the other half on mine?"

This being done, Sonny removed the plate and computed the bill while the president and Stockman ate and discussed the nation's eco-nomic peril. As they finished, Son-oy handed O'Neill the bill. O'Neill rose and glowered impressively at Sonny, "What's the idea?"
"Come, come now, Tip," said the president, smiling, "You know perfectly well there is no free

Youth Outwits Testers, Raising 250,000 Scores

DRINCETON, N.J. - A Florida high school junior who bested a panel of 16 college professors on a geometry question has forced the Educational Testing Service to correct the scores of 250,000 students who took a college board test.

"It's kind of overwhelming," said Daniel Lowen, a 17-year-old honors student in math and German at Cocoa Beach High School. "I didn't expect it to be such a big thing when I wrote in.
I was just worried about my own

Lowen was one of 1.3 million students who took the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test in October. The test was the first to be conducted under a new ETS policy of sending students copies of their tests and the answer key.

Father-Son Effort

When Lowen received his PSAT results in late December. he noticed that he had been marked wrong on a geometry problem involving two pyramids.
"It never entered my mind that they had made a mistake," Lowen said. But he sat down with his father, an engineer on the space shuttle project at Cape Canaveral, and the two became convinced that the boy's original er was correct. They wrote ETS and found out they were depended on the ratio of total The question was sent for review to math professors, according to Arthur M. Kroll, an ETS correct answers to incorrect re-The test, which also contains a vice president.

Professors Agree

"They all chose seven as the answer, but they all agreed that Daniel Lowen was correct when we gave them his reasoning," The ETS ootified Lowen that his score on the math section of the test would be raised from 74 to 75. The test is marked on a scale of 20 to 80. His new total is 1,350 of a possible 1,600. The ETS said it would also increase the scores of 250,000 other students who answered five instead of seven, but would not penalize those who chose seven. "Most of the 250,000 students in October. Only one, taken by about 800,000 students, contained the disputed question, Moulthrop said.

The PSAT is a warm-up tor the Scholastic Aptitude Test, a college entrance examination, and is used in selecting winners of National Merit Scholarships, Moulthrop said

He said that schools were notified of the score change "three to four weeks ago," and that the change, which cost ETS about $100,000, would not affect any students' chances of selection in September for a National Ment Scholarship. E. Belvin Williams, an ETS vice president, said questions similar to the disputed one would section on reading and writing skills, was given in two versions be tested more thoroughly.

When two pyramids were joined together (above right), testing service said that seven faces would result. Student Daniel Lowen came up with a different answer of five.

A taxi driver who found a purse in his cah and turned it over to his boss has been rewarded with $10,000. Juan Jose Garza, 28, found the purse after taking two women from a San Antonio, Texas, townbouse to the city airport. as, townbouse to the city airport. When he gave the purse to his boss for safekeeping, Garza said, he spotted $70 in it. What he appearently did not see was $100,000 in jewelry and cash. "I didn't even look in it," said Garza's supervisor, Walter Sitz. "We get a lot of things turned in." The owner, who asked not to be identified, went to the police and identified Garza the police and identified Garza through his taxi license. Police contacted Garza's company and were told that the purse was locked in the company safe. Detectives picked up the purse and early this week Gazza received a $10,000 cashier's check.

An American couple hoping to become the first husband-wife team to row across the Atlantic have set out from Casablanca in a 25-font boat. Curtis Saville, 34, and his 24-year-old wife, Kathy, of Providence, R.L., plan to cross the Atlantic in about 100 days and land "somewhere in Florida," according to Charles Sten of the U.S. Consulate in Casablanca, "Their boat is a self-righting, self-bailing craft with enclosed cabins fore and aft," Sten said. "It's empipped with a two-way radio and batteries powered by solar panels." Saville, a professional photographer, and his wife spent last year building the boat in a barn near their Providence. dence home, Sten said. They told him they logged 200 miles in prac-tice trips before arriving in Moroc-co on March II. He said the couple planned to make daily contact with amateur radio operators in Casablanca and the United States. The earliest transatlantic crossing by rowboat was made in 1896 by two Americans who rowed from New York to Italy in 55 days. Since then, several people have made the crossing alone. But, ac-cording to the Guinness Book of World Records, no woman has made the crossing either alone or with a partner.
